and have the men engaged there credited to the Camiden service of fice. In this way he got about 1,500 men a month. When he complained to the head office that he was not getting any men through the service he was told the records showed it was providing him with 1,500 men to take care of a labor turnover of 2,000 or 3,000 a month. When Mr. Leprohon was reminded that the unskilled labor control system was instituted by a proclamation of the President he said that did not change his opinion of it.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Declaring Expelled Socialists that he could elect the next President of the United States if he were at the head of the Federal Employment Service as planned under the bill before the committees, E. P. Leprohon, formerly of the Atlantic Loading Company, of Elwood, N. J., told the joint "Left Wingers" Send Consession of the House and Senate labor committees to-day about the workings of the emplyment service, as he saw tham during the war.

Senator Kenyon asked Mr. Leprohon how, if he were director of the service, he would go about electing a President The answer was that the whole organization would be so directed that none but men of the right political affiliations, duly recommended by party bosses, would get the jobs. Party bosses, would get soft between-campaigns jobs, with the result that there would be a rush of workers to enroll with the party which was cooperating with the service.

In telling of the operations of the service during the war Mr. Leprohon said that when it took over control of unskilled men he was left without employment sources, as the service did not supply him with enough men and would not let him conduct his own employment offices in Philadelphia and New York. He got around this rule partly by making a deal with the Camden office of the service to keep his own office in Philadelphia open Debate over barring intellectuals was prolonged at the session day before yesterday, on account of the fact that some of the delegates urged that Trotzky is an intellectual, and later it was discovered that some of the delegates themselves were in the same suspected class. After these discoveries the resolution was tabled.

A resolution was passed indorsing the proposed strike in favor of freeing from prison Mooney, Billings, Haywood and Debs. A letter of thanks to Debs for his weekly letters was authorized. Deportation of aliens was protested, and the convention went on record as favoring a labor strike between July 1 and 6.

Lieutenant Kenneth M. Murray, flying a Sopwith camel biplane, flew from Atlantic City to Farmingdale, N. Y., in sixty-one minutes yesterday. This flight, recorded officially, was announced by the Acro Club of America as being the fastest yet made. The distance is about 130 miles. The 'plane used by Lieutenant Murray is similar to the ill-fated machine used by Captain M. R. James, who has not been seen since he started from Boston to Atlantic City three weeks ago.
